1	Introduction	1
2	Theoretical Background	3
2.1	Relevant Communication Theories	3
2.1.1	Communication-Persuasion Paradigm	3
2.1.2	Media Equation Theory	5
2.2	Recommender Systems as Persuasive Social Actors	6
2.3	Conceptual Framework	7
3	Source Factors	9
3.1	Source Factors in Human–Human Communication	9
3.1.1	Credibility	9
3.1.2	Likeability	10
3.1.3	Multiple Sources	10
3.1.4	Source Cues	11
3.2	Applying Source Factors to Technology	14
3.2.1	Source Factors in Technology Contexts	14
3.2.2	Source Factors in Recommender Systems	15
4	Message Factors	21
4.1	Message Factors in Human–Human Communication	21
4.1.1	Message Structure	21
4.1.2	Message Content	23
4.1.3	Sequential-Request Strategies	24
4.2	Applying Message Factors to Technology	24
4.2.1	Recommendation Content	24
4.2.2	Recommendation Format	25
5	Receiver and Context Factors	27
5.1	Receiver Factors in Human–Human Communication	27

- 5.1.1 Natural Receiver Characteristics . . . . . 27
- 5.1.2 Induced Receiver Factors . . . . . 28
- 5.2 Context Factors in Human–Human Communication . . . . . 29
- 5.3 Applying Receiver and Context Factors to Technology . . . . . 31
  - 5.3.1 Recommender System User Factors . . . . . 31
  - 5.3.2 Context Factors in Recommender Systems . . . . . 32
- 6 Discussion . . . . . 35
- 7 Implications for Recommender System Design . . . . . 37
  - 7.1 Implications from the Source Perspective . . . . . 38
  - 7.2 Implications from the Message Perspective . . . . . 42
  - 7.3 Implications from the Receiver Perspective . . . . . 44
