Contents

1 The Law and Judiciary in Pakistan: Beyond a Liberal Understanding ............................................ 3
   1.1 The Liberal Legal Project in Pakistan .................................................. 3
   1.2 Theoretical Grasp of the Liberal Legal Project in Pakistan ............. 9
      1.2.1 Institutionalism and Functionalism of Liberal Understanding ................. 9
      1.2.2 Institutionalism and Functionalism in Postcolonies ........... 11
      1.2.3 Critique of Institutionalist-Functionalist Paradigm:
           The Issue of Change in Postcolonies ..................... 13
   1.3 Legal Analysis in Relation to State and Society: Theoretical
       Departure from Liberal Legal Analysis ........................................ 15
      1.3.1 Few Comments About Methodology .................................. 22
   1.4 A New Theoretical Understanding of State and Politics of
       Postcolonial Pakistan .............................................. 23
      1.4.1 ‘Liberal’ Understanding of Law and State in
           Postcolonial Pakistan ........................................ 23
      1.4.2 From a ‘Legal State’ to a ‘Class State’ ............................ 25
      1.4.3 Postcolonial Pakistani State: Factual or Theoretical
           Departure? ................................................. 26
      1.4.4 Hegemonic Class?: Redefining the Place
           of Centre–Periphery Relations in State Formation ....... 28
      1.4.5 Myth of Miserable Politicians vis-a-vis Military:
           Nature of Hegemony ......................................... 30
      1.4.6 Crisis of the Hegemony as the Crisis of the State .......... 35
      1.4.7 Bringing Class Struggle Back in State Formation .......... 38

References ................................................ 39
Contents

2 Law in the Era of Capitalist Modernization (1947–1960s)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2.1 Law and State During Colonial Rule</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2 Did Pakistan Inherit a Good Judicial System?</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.3 Modernizers Even Before Modernization</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4 Class Formation Behind ‘Overdeveloped’ State</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.5 Pindi Conspiracy Case</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.6 Moulvi Tamizuddin Khan Case</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.7 The Judiciary as a Part of Juridico-Bureaucratic State Structure</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.8 The Significance of the Shift in Hegemonic Influence from U.K. to U.S.</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.9 1958—General Ayub’s Coup (Dosso Case)</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.9.1 Revolution/Evolution or Preventing ‘Revolution’</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.9.2 Ayub ‘the Modernizer’ and Pakistan as the Experimental Lab</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.9.3 Judiciary’s Modernization ‘Coalition’</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.10 Democracy and Fundamental Rights in Political Development: A Critical Appraisal of Munir, Cornelius and Kayani CJ's</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.10.1 Presidential System Like U.S.: Elite Democracy or Controlled Democracy?</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.10.2 The Cornelius ‘Rights’ Approach to Substitute for the Democratic Deficit?</td>
<td>80</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.10.3 The Nature of Politics in Rights Cases</td>
<td>84</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.10.4 Islam and Jirga System in Nation-Building</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.11 The Collapse of Modernization and Revisiting the Role of Law</td>
<td>93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>References</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

3 Law Under Bhutto’s Socialism (1970–1980s)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>3.1.1 The Rising Class and National Liberation Struggles and Changing Place of Law in Political Development</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1.2 Asma Jilani Case: For Democracy or Just Against a Dictator?</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1.3 Zia-ur-Rahman Case: A Judicial Retreat on the Face of Popular Democracy</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.1 Judicial Reaction to Bhutto’s Socialism</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.2 There Is a Need of Check on the Legislature</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.3 Recall for a Presidential System</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2.4 Rights Under the Bhutto Regime: Confrontation or a Substitute for Democratic Deficit</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
3.2.5 Legislature’s Reaction ........................................... 126
3.2.6 Liberal Rights, But No to Ethno-nationalism—The National Awami Party Case ............................ 127
3.2.7 Bhutto’s Downfall: Countering the ‘Suppression Explanation’ .................................................. 129
3.3 Juridico-Bureaucratic Cornelius Tradition Restored (1980s) ...... 131
3.3.1 Rehabilitating the Old State Structure .......................... 133
3.3.2 Rolling Back Popular Democracy to the Extent of “Judicial Murder” of Bhutto ............................ 134
3.3.3 Zia’s Constitutional Engineering: Fine Tuning of the Juridico-Bureaucratic Structure ......................... 136
3.5 Public Interest Litigation (PIL): A Deficit for Democracy, Dying Working Class Politics and the Emergence of Middle Class ................................................................. 141
3.5.1 Benazir Bhutto Cases ............................................. 142
3.5.2 PIL, Islam and Judiciary’s Rise ............................... 144
3.6 The Rise of Liberal and Quasi-liberal (Islamic) ‘Legalism’ and the Dying Working Class Struggle ..................... 148
References ....................................................................... 152

4  A Strong Judiciary in a ‘Weakening State’ (the 1990s) ............ 157
4.1 Class Formations Under Neo-liberalism ............................. 157
4.1.1 The Start of Neo-liberal Globalization and the Rise of New Institutionalism ................................... 157
4.1.2 1990s: The State for the Market and not for the People ......................................................... 159
4.1.3 Changing State Formation and Class Formation in Pakistan ...................................................... 160
4.2.1 Class Formation: Which is the Hegemonic Class? ........ 162
4.2.2 The Cornelius Tradition in the Judicial Office .......... 164
4.2.3 The Dissolution of the Benazir Bhutto Assembly Case ....................................................... 166
4.2.4 Did the Legislature Not Legislate or Were There Legislative Hurdles? ................................ 167
4.2.5 Political Defection: A Weak Democracy in a ‘Strong State’ .................................................... 168
4.2.6 Appointment of Judges (1988–1990) ......................... 169
4.2.7 Not the Unconstitutional Act but Constitution Itself was a Problem ........................................ 170

4.3 The First Regime of Nawaz Sharif (1990–93): Separating the Powers in a Weakening State ........................................ 171
4.3.1 Contours of the ‘Liberal Legal Project’ in Pakistan ............. 172
4.3.2 Separation of Power and Independence of the Judiciary: A Gap in Parliamentary Democracy ............ 174
4.3.3 Bar’s Politics: Constitutional Politics and Rising Petit Bourgeoisie ............................................. 176
4.3.4 What About the Working Class in the ‘Liberal’ and Quasi-liberal Project? ........................................... 178
4.3.5 Public Interest Litigation: A New Level of the Juridico-Bureaucratic Structure in the Cornelius Tradition .................................................. 179
4.3.6 Dissolution of Nawaz’s Assembly (1993) ................... 188

4.4 Benazir Bhutto’s Second Term (1993–96): The Judiciary and Democracy Confrontation ................................. 189
4.4.1 Appointment of Judges: The Democratic Regime Exercising Constitutional Power? .......................... 190
4.4.2 Judges’ Case: Appointment of Judges Is not the Right of a Democratic Regime ................................. 191
4.4.3 Dissolution of Assembly at the Altar of Independence of Judiciary ....................................................... 194
4.4.4 ‘State Capture’: Disenchantment with the Washington Consensus and Subalterns ............................. 195

4.5 Nawaz Sharif’s Second Term (1997–1999) ...................... 196
4.5.1 Independence of the Judiciary to Judicial Activism: Confronting Democracy ‘Actively’ ......................... 196
4.5.2 Old Juridico-Bureaucratic Structure Reacting to Democracy ......................................................... 197
4.5.3 Resisting a Parallel Judicial System of Special Anti-Terrorist Courts ........................................... 199
4.5.4 Tools Beyond Judicial Means: From Suo Moto to Social Investigation and the Organ for ‘National Integration’ ...................................................... 200
4.5.5 Appointment of Judges: The Judiciary’s Exclusive Right ................................................................. 200
4.5.6 Challenging the Supremacy of the Legislature .................. 201
4.5.7 1998: Supremacy of the Parliament? ......................... 203

4.6 The Mid-1990s: Crucial Years for Public Interest Litigation .... 206
4.7 ‘Good Governance’: A Class Explanation of Musharraf’s Coup (October, 1999) ........................................ 208
     References .................................................. 210
5 Good Governance by Judiciary—The 2000s

5.1 Institutional Rearrangement: Installing the Governance Structure

5.2 State Formation in the Era of Good Governance

5.3 Judicial Decisions Under Dictatorship: Restoring the Juridico-Bureaucratic Structure

5.4 Class Formations Under ‘Good Governance’

5.4.1 An Undermined Legislature

5.4.2 Struggle Against the Judiciary’s Encroachment on the Legislative Powers

5.4.3 Supremacy of the Constitution as Supremacy of the Judiciary

5.4.4 Opposition: Correcting the Judiciary Before Democracy

5.4.5 The Liberal Legal Project

5.5.1 Public Interest Litigation Until 2006: A Comfortable Substitute for Democracy

5.5.2 2006: The Judiciary’s Own Consciousness of Its Linear Development and Weaknesses in Leading Global Modernity

5.6 Lawyers’ Movement: From Supremacy of the Constitution to Supremacy of the ‘Rule of Law’

5.6.1 Emergency Against Judicial Activism and Public Interest Litigation

5.6.2 Rule of Law or Politics: Class Formation and the Lawyers’ Movement

5.6.3 Lawyers’ Movement: A Political Movement for a ‘Non-Political’ Judiciary?

5.7 After the Lawyers’ Movement: Reclaiming Parliamentary Sovereignty

5.7.1 From Parliamentary Democracy to Constitutional Democracy

5.8 ‘Loud’ Rights in a ‘Shallow Democracy’: A Structural Analysis

5.8.1 Bonded Labour

5.8.2 Gender and Public Interest Litigation

5.8.3 Public Interest Litigation and the Environment

5.8.4 Conclusion

References
6  Some Theoretical Implications ................................. 263
   6.1  A Departure from a ‘Liberal’ Analysis About Pakistan .... 263
   6.2  Theoretical Implications for Law and Development,
        Looking at the Work of Douglas North, Brian Tamanaha,
        David Trubek ........................................ 265
       6.2.1  Douglas North .................................... 265
       6.2.2  Brian Tamanaha .................................. 267
       6.2.3  David Trubek .................................... 269
   6.3  Post-Development, TWAIL and Critical Legal Studies .... 272
   6.4  Social Change Beyond Law: Final Reflections .......... 275
References ................................................ 277
Law, State and Inequality in Pakistan
Explaining the Rise of the Judiciary
Azeem, M.
2017, XVIII, 278 p., Hardcover
ISBN: 978-981-10-3844-0