European Journal of Mathematics (EJM) is an international journal that publishes research papers in all fields of mathematics. The journal also publishes research-survey papers intended to provide non-specialists with insight into topics of current research in different areas of mathematics.

The journal includes authors from all over the world while aiming to become a premier source of high quality research and scholarship. The journal will provide a natural home for a significant body of current research and serve as a useful forum for ideas on future studies in all branches of mathematics.

All contributions are required to meet high standards of quality and originality. EJM has an international editorial board which currently consists of editors who contributed to the development of the Central European Journal of Mathematics. The journal is subscription-based without author publication fees.

The renowned mathematician Fedor Bogomolov leads a committed team of editors.
