Head & Face Medicine is a truly multidisciplinary open access journal that publishes basic and clinical research within the cranial, facial and oral specialties. To date, no journal has provided readers with multidisciplinary information in the field of head and face medicine. By covering surgical and non-surgical management of diseases, and including original research concerning basic science, disease progression, etiology, and epidemiology of diseases in the complex cranial and facial area, Head & Face Medicine provides a vital resource for clinicians, researchers and healthcare professionals in the field.
