IZA Journal of Labor & Development

Editors: D. Lam; H. Lehmann
Managing Editor: J. Wahba

- IZA Journal of Labor & Development examines various aspects of economic development related to the labor market
- Very fast decision making and publication process
- High quality outlet for both theoretical and applied papers

The IZA Journal of Labor & Development is a peer-reviewed open access journal published under the brand SpringerOpen, covering all aspects of economic development related to issues of human behavior and/or the labor market of developing, emerging or transition countries, including both policy issues and more structural problems.

Coverage includes all fields of labor economics in a development context, both empirical and theoretical.

To enable the journals to make all of their content open access, usually SpringerOpen journals levy an article-processing charge (APC) for each manuscript accepted after peer review.

The publication costs for articles in the IZA Journal Series are covered by IZA - Institute for the Study of Labor, so authors do not need to pay an article processing charge. Authors are supposed to actively support the IZA journals by refereeing a certain number of articles. Referee reports will be due 21 days after you accept assignment.

More detailed information about the journal can be found on its dedicated website at www.izajold.com, where you can also access all articles. As an additional service, all articles are also hosted on SpringerLink, Springer’s online collection of STM books, journals, protocols and reference works.

Giving authors in their area of expertise the opportunity to publish open access

- High visibility thanks to unrestricted online access
- Rigorous peer-review and high-quality author services
- Creative Commons licensed – authors retain copyright
- Citation tracking and inclusion in bibliographic databases
- Easy compliance with open access mandates