City, Territory and Architecture
An interdisciplinary debate on project perspectives
Editor-in-Chief: G. Maciocco

- Explores conceptual and physical relations between city, territory and architecture
- Fosters interdisciplinary dialog on the relational nature of projects for spaces where people settle and interrelate
- Stresses ethical concern and interventions proposed by architects and planners

Focusing on pluralism and project perspectives, this journal opens interdisciplinary dialog on the relational nature of projects for spaces where people settle and interrelate. Stresses ethical concern and interventions proposed by architects and planners.

Giving authors in their area of expertise the opportunity to publish open access
- High visibility thanks to unrestricted online access
- Rigorous peer-review and high-quality author services
- Creative Commons licensed – authors retain copyright
- Citation tracking and inclusion in bibliographic databases
- Easy compliance with open access mandates