

Contents

1 Introduction	1
Step 1: Type of Program	2
2 Creating At-Risk Children and Youth	3
The Role of Prevention	4
How Families Help Create At-Risk Children and Youth	4
How Schools Help Create At-Risk Children and Youth	6
How School Counselors and Psychologists Help Create At-Risk Children and Youth	7
How Communities Help Create At-Risk Children and Youth	9
How Evidence-Based Programs Help Create At-Risk Children and Youth	10
How Reliance on Manualized Programs Helps Create At-Risk Children and Youth	12
Good Intentions Are Not Enough	12
Developing Group-Centered Program Packets	13
Benefits of School Mental Health	14
Step 2: Identify the Problem	14
Correcting At-Risk Problems in the Schools	15
Real-World Applications	15
Observational Extensions	15
Troubleshooting Checklists for Organizing a New Group	16
A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “Captain A and His Hot Air Balloon”	16
3 Organizing a New Group	23
Underlying Principles of an Effective Group-Centered Prevention Program	23
Developing Effective Prevention Programs	27
Designing a Group-Centered Program Packet	28
Step 3: Proposed Change	29
Designing a Program of Change	31

- Real-World Applications..... 31
 - Observational Extensions..... 31
 - Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New Group-Centered Program..... 32
 - A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “Self-Reflection: Using a Narrative to Teach Writing Skills” 32
- 4 Identifying the Needs of the Group 37
 - Group Composition..... 38
 - Describing the Group 38
 - Step 4: Description of the Group 39
 - Evaluating Group Needs 43
 - Real-World Applications..... 43
 - Observational Extensions..... 43
 - Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New Group-Centered Program..... 43
 - A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “Sign-in, Please” 44
- 5 Using Group Process as an Agent of Change 47
 - The Advantages of Using Groups 48
 - Using Group Process to Bring About Change 48
 - Group Process and Group Dynamics are not the Same 49
 - Help! This is an Impossible Group 50
 - Developing Positive Group Process 52
 - Formative Evaluations..... 52
 - Formative Evaluation: Part 1..... 53
 - Formative Evaluation: Part 2..... 54
 - Using Formative Evaluations in Designing an Effective Group-Centered Program..... 57
 - Developing a Group-Centered Prevention Program 57
 - Step 5: Building a Group Structure that Leads to Long Term Change 57
 - Using the Results from a Formative Evaluation 59
 - Creating a New Program..... 61
 - Real-World Applications..... 61
 - Observational Extensions..... 61
 - Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New Group-Centered Program..... 61
 - A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “Match the Sound” 62
- 6 Group Process and Motivation 65
 - Intrinsic Motivation Helps Students Cope with Unexpected Situations in the Classroom 66

Intrinsic Motivation Helps Students Achieve
 Psychological Wellness..... 67
 Creating an Intrinsic Learning Environment 67
 How to Use the Six Motivators in Your Program Design 71
 Step 6: Building Intrinsic Motivators into Your Program Design..... 71
 Intrinsic Motivation is Essential for an Effective Group-Centered
 Prevention Program..... 76
 Real-World Applications..... 76
 Observational Extensions..... 76
 Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New
 Group-Centered Program..... 76
 A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention:
 “A Simple Pop-Up Book” 77

7 The Role of Interaction in a Group 79
 Building Interaction into Your Group Design..... 80
 A Strong Introduction is Essential to Positive Group Interaction..... 80
 Group Interaction is the Key to Successful Group Programming 81
 Keep Interaction Positive 82
 Interaction Must Be Positive to Be Effective 83
 The Need for Acceptance..... 84
 Positive Interaction Leads to Intrinsic Motivation..... 84
 Creative Does Not Mean Successful..... 85
 Create Positive Interactive Interventions 85
 Evaluate the Effectiveness of Interactive Interventions 85
 Step 7: Creating Positive Interaction 85
 Interaction is Essential for Success..... 89
 Real-World Applications..... 89
 Observational Extensions..... 89
 Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New
 Group-Centered Program..... 89
 A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “Manners Please” 90
 Session 1: Would You Like to Join Us for Dinner? 91
 Session 2: When You Call on the Telephone 92
 Session 3: You’re Invited 96

8 Self-Efficacy: The Learning Component in Schools 99
 How Does Self-Efficacy Work?..... 100
 Why is Skill-Building So Important with Self-Efficacy? 100
 How Can You Design Interventions that Rebuild Self-Efficacy? 101
 Self-Efficacy Helps Reduce Classroom Problems..... 103
 Step 8: Creating Learning Centers..... 103
 Ready-to-Use Program Packets 106
 Real-World Applications..... 108
 Observational Extensions..... 108

- Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New Group-Centered Program..... 108
- A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “The Grumps on Vacation” 108
- 9 Group Cohesion: The Therapeutic Factor in Groups 117
- Paving the Way for Cohesion and Change..... 118
- Using Therapeutic Factors in Group Programming..... 119
- Step 9: Building Therapeutic Factors into Your Program Design 126
- Real-World Applications..... 131
- Observational Extensions..... 131
- Troubleshooting Checklists for Designing a New Group-Centered Program..... 131
- A Ready-to-Use Group-Centered Intervention: “The World Pollution Conference Puppet Play” 131
- 10 Back to the Classroom 141
- To Erase Failure in the Classroom 142
- To Erase Failure in School-Based Mental Health 143
- Step 10: Write the Final Draft for Your Group-Centered Prevention Program..... 144
- References..... 145
- Index..... 153

<http://www.springer.com/978-1-4419-7247-7>

Group-Centered Prevention Programs for At-Risk
Students

Clanton Harpine, E.

2011, XX, 155 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4419-7247-7