

Contents for Volume II

7	Introduction to Volume II	1
Part II In the World of the Scientific Revolution
8	Not Only in Latin, but also in Dutch, Chinese, Italian and German	5
8.1	Aristoxenus with Numbers, or Simon Stevin and Zhu Zaiyu	5
8.2	Reaping What Has Been Sown. Galileo Galilei, the Jesuits and the Chinese.....	18
8.3	Johannes Kepler: The Importance of Harmony	37
9	Beyond Latin, French, English and German: The Invention of Symbolism	107
9.1	From Marin Mersenne to Blaise Pascal	107
9.2	René Descartes, Isaac Beeckman and John Wallis	158
9.3	Constantijn and Christiaan Huygens	192
10	Between Latin, French, English and German: The Language of Transcendence	227
10.1	Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz	227
10.2	Sir Isaac Newton and Mr. Robert Hooke	265
10.3	Symbolism and Transcendence	291
11	Between Latin and French	327
11.1	Jean-Philippe Rameau, the Bernoullis and Leonhard Euler	327
11.2	Jean le Rond d’Alembert, Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Denis Diderot	368
11.3	Counting, Singing and Listening: From Rameau to Mozart	412
12	From French to German	431
12.1	From Music-Making to Acoustics: Luigi Giuseppe Lagrange e Joseph Jean-Baptiste Fourier	431

12.2	Too Much Noise, from Harmony to Harmonics: Bernhard Riemann and Hermann von Helmholtz	439
12.3	Ludwig Boltzmann and Max Planck	466
12.4	Arnold Schönberg and Albert Einstein	483
 Part III It Is Not Even Heard
13	In the Language of the Venusians	511
13.1	Black Languages	511
13.2	Stones, Pieces of String and Songs	513
13.3	Dancing, Singing and Navigating	514
14	Come on, Apophis	527
14.1	Gott mit uns	527
 Bibliography		535
 Index		575

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-0348-0674-9>

And Yet It Is Heard

Musical, Multilingual and Multicultural History of the Mathematical Sciences - Volume 2

Tonietti, T.M.

2014, VIII, 593 p. 96 illus., 1 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-0348-0674-9

A product of Birkhäuser Basel