

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Returning to the Puritan Apocalypse	9
1.2	Thomas Brightman	13
1.3	Brightman: A Brief Biography	16
	References	24
2	Hermeneutics and the Jews in Protestant Thought	29
2.1	The Literal and Allegorical Senses of Scripture	30
2.2	Hermeneutics, Eschatology and the Jews in the Middle Ages	36
2.3	Hermeneutics and the Book of Revelation in the Reformation	39
2.4	Hermeneutics, Eschatology and the Jews in Early Modern England	42
	References	55
3	Historicising Allegory: Thomas Brightman and the Historicising Commentary	59
3.1	Recasting the Historical Sense	60
3.2	The Seven Letters to the Churches: Dealing with Historical Tension	69
3.3	The Millennium and the Opening of History	76
3.4	Historicising Allegory: The Song of Songs and the Jewish Promises	81
	References	93
4	Consistent Literalism and the Restoration of the Jews	97
4.1	The Role of the Jews	98
4.2	The Jewish Promises: “Consistent” Literalism	107
4.3	The Re-created Self: Emphasising “Englishness”	118
	References	127
5	Thomas Brightman and Judeo-Centrism 1610–1640	131
5.1	Separatist Readings of Brightman	132
5.2	The Early Reception of Brightman’s Work	137

5.3 The Development of Brightman’s Hermeneutic, 1610–1620 141

5.4 Controversy: Sir Henry Finch 150

5.5 The Influence of Brightman on Joseph Mede 154

References 163

6 Tracing Brightman’s Influence: Judeo-Centrism, 1640–60 167

6.1 Brightman as Radical Prophet 168

6.2 Consistent Literalism and the Jews 173

6.3 The Whitehall Conference 188

References 203

7 Conclusion 207

References 215

Appendix: A Comparison of Editions of Brightman’s

Revelation of the Revelation* 217

References 220

Select Bibliography 221

Primary Sources: Manuscripts 221

Primary Sources: Printed Works 221

Secondary Sources: General Reference Works 226

Secondary Sources: Unpublished Theses 226

Secondary Sources: Books 226

Secondary Sources: Articles and Essays 232

Index 239

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-04761-4>

The Restoration of the Jews: Early Modern Hermeneutics, Eschatology, and National Identity in the Works of Thomas Brightman

Crome, A.

2014, XIII, 242 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-04761-4