Table of Contents

Welcome Address
Ernst-Christoph Meier ................................................................. 9

‘The End of the World as We Know it’!? On Interventionist Overstretch, Post-Interventionism and Neo-Interventionism: An Essayist Introduction
Bastian Giegerich & Gerhard Kümmel ...................................................... 11

I Macro-Level Perspectives

Post-Interventionist Zeitgeist: The Ambiguity of Security Policy
Florian P. Kühn ................................................................................................................. 17

Soldiers Drawn into Politics? Civil-Military Relations, Hybrid Military Spaces and the Future of Interventions
Chiara Ruffa, Christopher Dandeker & Pascal Vennesson ........................................ 29

Searching for Minimalist Humanitarian Intervention Strategies in Global Security Policy
Wilfried von Bredow ........................................................................................................ 41

The West’s Last War? Neo-Interventionism, Strategic Surprise, and the Waning Appetite for Playing the Away Game
Christian Leuprecht ......................................................................................................... 63

Post-Interventionist or Newly Responsible?
Europe as a Security Provider
Sven Biscop ......................................................................................................................... 73

The Democratic Civil-Military Relations of Austerity: Thoughts about the Past and the Present
Donald Abenheim ............................................................................................................. 81

Factual Knowledge and Public Support for German Military Operations: The Case of the German ISAF Mission in Afghanistan
Rüdiger Fiebig .................................................................................................................... 93
The Future of Liberal Interventionism in UK Foreign Policy
Tim Oliver ................................................................. 111

A Note on Military Intervention in an Era of Globalization
Manas Chatterji .......................................................... 131

II Meso-Level Perspectives

Military Strategic Trends since 9/11
Ben Barry .................................................................. 137

A British Perspective on Future Contingency Operations
John Henderson .......................................................... 143

The Price of Disengagement: Past Trends and Prospects for Portuguese Participation in International Military Missions
Helena Carreiras .......................................................... 149

Expeditionary Capabilities and the Use of Force in a Post-Interventionist Era: The Case of Sweden
Franz Kernic ............................................................ 165

Democratic Soldiers as Marginal Men: The Impact of Security-Cultural Transformations on the Military in Europe
Sabine Mannitz .......................................................... 173

The Quest for ‘Evidence-Based Soldiering’
Joseph Soeters .......................................................... 191

A Premium on Organizational and Technological Efficiency:
Making the Comprehensive Approach Work
Ralph Thiele .............................................................. 203

Unmanned Warfare: Towards a Neo-Interventionist Era?
Niklas Schörning .......................................................... 221

The Legacy of Military Heterogeneity in a Post-Interventionist Era:
Diversity as a Challenge to the Military Ideal of Homogeneity
Heiko Biehl ............................................................. 237
Expectations: An Underestimated Factor in International Crisis Management
Walter Feichtinger ............................................................... 257

III Micro-Level Perspectives

Militaries and the Multiple Negotiations of Intervention
Eyal Ben-Ari ........................................................................... 265

Generation ISAF: Operational Realities, Self-Image and Organization
Anja Seiffert & Julius Hess ..................................................... 279

Auf verlorenem Posten
Marco Seliger ........................................................................ 303

How Military Interventions Increase the Gap between Soldiers und Politics
Jens Warburg ......................................................................... 311

About the Authors .................................................................. 325