

Acknowledgements

This book is based on my doctoral thesis handed in at the University of Mannheim in September 2012.

First of all, I wish to thank Prof. Dr. Bernhard Ebbinghaus and Prof. Dr. Claus Wendt for supervising this thesis and supporting my research in numerous ways. Both of them provided valuable feedback on the developing manuscript and their doors were always open to discuss questions, ideas, and problems.

I am also grateful to the Mannheim Center for European Social Research (MZES) and the Mannheim Graduate School of Social and Economic Sciences for providing a great research environment with an excellent infrastructure and stimulating seminars and training. I wish to thank all my colleagues and fellow PhD students at the MZES for all of the stimulating discussions and exchanges as well as my coffee-break team for many joyful moments.

My research has also profited from my participation in several summer schools and conferences as well as a research stay at the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI), which was made possible by Tommy Ferrarini and the EQUALSOC Network of Excellence, funded by the EU.

The idea for this thesis was born during our project “Attitudes Toward Welfare State Institutions: New Perspectives for the Comparative Welfare State Analysis,” which was funded by the German Research Foundation (DFG) and headed by Claus Wendt. My work greatly benefited from our discussions and the joint research, and I am grateful to my colleagues Michaela Pfeifer and Claus Wendt for the successful and very pleasant cooperation. Furthermore, I would like to thank our student assistants in Mannheim and Siegen for their support, in particular Regina Jutz, Nadine Reibling, Ines Schaurer, and Pia Schütz.

I am especially grateful to Ryan DeLaney, who thoroughly proofread most parts of this thesis, as well as to Miriam Ott, who helped in collecting and editing the family-policy indicators.

Thanks for their support also go to the administrative and IT team at the MZES, namely Sibille Eberle, Josiane Hess, Beate Rossi, Marianne Schneider, Helena Wozniak, Marlene Alle, and Christian Melbeck, and to Susanne Müller at the University of Siegen.

I also wish to thank Christian Albrekt Larsen, Thomas Bahle, Agnes Blome, Tommy Ferrarini, Ulrich Kohler, Einar Overbye, and Stefan Svallfors as well as all members of the EQUALSOC Institutional Change group for their stimulating discussions and helpful comments on my work.

Of the many people who have, in one or the other way, contributed to the completion of this thesis, I would like to extend my appreciation to: Sharon Ashcroft, Jennifer Boothby, Jeff Kavanagh, Gabriele Mischke, and Swantje Schmidt for proofreading parts of this thesis; Claire Corkhill and Wolfgang Mischke for their valuable comments on parts of the manuscript; and Benjamin Branzko for his constant encouragement, emotional support, and delicious cooking.

Last but not least, I am deeply grateful to my family and friends for their continuous support and their unwavering belief in my abilities.

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-658-03576-1>

Public Attitudes toward Family Policies in Europe
Linking Institutional Context and Public Opinion

Mischke, M.

2014, 240 p. 10 illus., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-658-03576-1