

Contents

Abbreviations	9
1 Introduction	11
2 Theoretical background and literature review	25
2.1 Institutional theory	26
2.2 The link between institutions and welfare attitudes	29
2.3 Differences among social groups	37
2.4 Deservingness perceptions and feedback processes	42
2.5 A conceptual framework	45
2.6 Family policy as a special policy field	50
2.7 Classifications of family-policy institutions	54
2.8 Attitudes toward family policies – state of the art	59
2.9 Public attitudes toward family policies: Hypotheses	63
3 Family policies in Europe – a cluster analysis	75
3.1 Indicators for the construction of family-policy types	78
3.2 Methods	89
3.3 Family-policy types: Results from the cluster analysis	90
3.4 Conclusion	98
4 Family policies and public opinion	103
4.1 The three dimensions of attitudes	104
4.2 The link between family policies and public attitudes	105
4.3 Public attitudes in comparative perspective	108
4.4 Research strategy and variables	117
4.5 The family-policy indicators and public attitudes	121
4.6 The family-policy typology and public attitudes	123
4.7 Conclusion	128
5 Family policy, contextual features, and public opinion	129
5.1 Contextual indicators	131
5.2 The family-policy clusters put into context	134
5.3 Family policies, contextual features, and public attitudes	140
5.4 Public expenditures for families	147
5.5 Conclusion	152

6	Social cleavages within European welfare states	157
6.1	Independent variables and hypotheses.....	159
6.2	Correlations	166
6.3	Cluster- and country-specific regression models	167
6.4	Conclusion	202
7	Summary and discussion.....	205
8	Bibliography.....	229

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-658-03576-1>

Public Attitudes toward Family Policies in Europe
Linking Institutional Context and Public Opinion

Mischke, M.

2014, 240 p. 10 illus., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-658-03576-1