

Contents

Prefatory Remarks	VII
Preface and Acknowledgements	IX
Contents	XI
List of Abbreviations	XIV

Introduction: Psychogeography and the Literary City	1
---	---

PART I

Conceptualising and Historicising Psychogeography

19

1. Experiencing the City: Urban Space in Literature	21
---	----

1.1 Real and Imagined Cities	22
------------------------------------	----

1.1.1 Literary and Cultural Studies and the Concept of Space	22
--	----

1.1.2 Urban Imaginaries and Cities Real and Imagined	27
--	----

1.1.3 Experiencing the Urban Imaginary at Street-Level	36
--	----

1.2 Psychogeography and Urban Space: From Walking to Writing	42
--	----

1.2.1 Psychogeography and the Situationist International	43
--	----

1.2.2 Literary Psychogeography, or what is Psychogeographical Writing?	50
---	----

1.2.3 Literary Psychogeography: Now and Then	60
--	----

2. Bodies and Spaces: Eighteenth-Century Literary Psychogeography and the London Walker	65
--	----

2.1 From Ashes to Phoenix: London Destroyed and Rebuilt	66
---	----

The City Destroyed: “London Was, but Is No More”	66
--	----

The City Rebuilt: Resurgam – I Shall Rise	71
---	----

2.2 Into the Streets: Walking in Eighteenth-Century London	79
--	----

The Street	79
-------------------------	----

Public Perambulation:
------------------------------	--

Promenades, Pleasure Gardens and the Crowd	85
---	----

London Walkers	90
-----------------------------	----

2.3 Eighteenth-Century Literary Psychogeography:
From Experience to Text.....	95
2.3.1 Experiencing the City:
Themes in Literary Psychogeography.....	96
Blends of Fact and Fiction	96
Sense of Place	99
Dark Visions of the City	101
Multi-Sensory Experiences	107
2.3.2 Experiencing the Text:
Formal Elements of Literary Psychogeography.....	114
Focalisation	114
Multimodality	117
Rhetorics of Walking	119
PART II
London Imaginaries: Walking Experiences in a Changing City	125
3 The Art of Walking.....	127
3.1 John Gay's Trivia :
Or the Art of Walking the Streets of London (1716).....	128
3.2 John Thelwall's The Peripatetic (1793).....	157
3.3 Conclusion.....	181
4. "A History of Darkness, Pain and Fear":
Daniel Defoe's Journal of the Plague Year (1722).....	185
5. Grub Street Writings and London Low Life.....	215
5.1 Ned Ward's The London Spy (1698-1700).....	217
5.2 Tom Brown's Amusements Serious and Comical (1700).....	241
5.3 Conclusion.....	261

6. Women Walkers and Female Experiences of the City.....	265
6.1 The Fallen Woman: Moll Flanders (1722) and The Midnight-Ramble (1754).....	266
6.2 The Compliant Woman: Frances Burney's Evelina (1778).....	278
6.3 Conclusion.....	287
7. Romantic Visions of the City William Wordsworth's "Residence in London" (1805).....	293
Conclusion: How Does the World Enter the Text?.....	319
Bibliography.....	329

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-658-17742-3>

Walking in the City

Urban Experience and Literary Psychogeography in Eighteenth-Century London

Löffler, C.

2017, XIV, 357 p., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-658-17742-3