Characteristics: The relationship between mental disorders and reproductive functions in women has fascinated scientific thinkers for centuries. Nevertheless, it has been well documented that sex and gender differences in mental illness and their treatment are understudied until now. In many cases, the role of the obstetric-gynecologic event or condition in the psychiatric illness is not recognized: Many women have questions and concerns about psychiatric aspects of menstruation and menopause. Feelings about hysterectomy or the loss or termination of a pregnancy may play a role in the dynamics of a current conflict. Many manias, depressions, and other psychoses are related to endocrinology. Sexual abuse is a frequent feature of the history of patients with several major psychiatric disorders. Current developments in reproductive technology are new challenges for psychiatrists as well. The editors of Archives of Women's Mental Health hope that this journal will assist clinicians, teachers, and researchers to incorporate knowledge of all aspects of women's mental health into current and future clinical care and research. The journal's scope includes psychodynamics, social, and biological aspects of all psychiatric and psychosomatic disorders in women. The editors especially welcome interdisciplinary studies, focusing on the interface between psychiatry, psychosomatics, obstetrics, and gynecology. The exchange of knowledge between psychiatrists and obstetrician-gynecologists is one of the major aims of the journal.

General Terms and Conditions of the Springer Professional Media

1. Agreements additional to or differing from the publisher’s terms and conditions are only binding when they were confirmed in writing by the publisher.

2. Verbal agreements and information regardless of what kind, particularly with employees of the publisher, are non-binding. Agreements and information are accepted by the publisher as binding only when they take place in written form.

3. It is the responsibility of the client to inform himself about the respectively valid advertising rates and the amount of the accruing duties and taxes (particularly advertising taxes and value added taxes) before the placing of the advertisement.

4. The publisher reserves the right to withdraw from implementing the orders at any time and without stating the reasons, but particularly in the case of default in payment or for legal considerations. This also applies in the case of the existence of an annual contract or a contract for repeated appearance of publications. The rebate is granted in accordance with the extent of the actual sales volume.

5. The client guarantees the publisher that the advertisement (including images) violates no legal conditions and the rights of third parties are not infringed upon. The client commits himself to indemnify and hold the publisher harmless from and against all claims, which are based on the respective advertisement (including images) as well as to provide full satisfaction for the resulting disadvantages. This applies particularly to all types of claims under Competition Law, unless these are asserted by competitors of the client or by competitors of the publisher, to copyright claims of any kind, insertion costs of replies, whose publication was assigned to the publisher by the court, administrative authority and juridical penalties, compensations under the Media Law, claims for damages of whatever type and claims for publications of judgments or notices according e.g., to the Media Law. The obligation of the client to indemnify and hold the publisher harmless is understood including all incidental procedural costs. This also applies analogously to all other comparable consequences, for example, notices according to e.g., Art. 37 of the Media Law. The publisher reserves the right to reject orders without giving reasons. The publisher is not obliged to examine the advertisement or a reply request.

6. The publisher is entitled, at any time even without consultation with the client to designate insertions as “advertisement”, “advertising”, “non-gratuitous insert,” “offsetprint” or “advertising”. The decision as to whether such a designation is necessary or purposeful is thus incumbent exclusively upon the publisher. If, as an exception, the publisher should omit such a designation at the request of the client, the client is liable for any disadvantage accruing therefore to the publisher.

7. In the case of placing orders or text changes by telephone, complaints regarding hearing mistakes or composition errors are not recognized by the publisher. Any changes in this text are subsequently to be confirmed in writing, however, still before the ad deadline.

8. Arbitrary contractions of words, which lead to unusual and ungrammatical word formations, are rejected. The publisher reserves the right to make word cuts, which do not misrepresent the meaning of the advertisement. The publisher reserves the right to typeset texts according to the new spelling rules.

9. Responsibility for the timely provision of the copy material resides with the advertisers. The publisher is liable for the printing quality only if flawless copy or advertising material such as prospectuses, etc. are provided. The utilization of the copy material takes place without guaranty subject to the customary diligence. Prospectuses, etc. are to be delivered free to the publisher.

10. With special forms of advertising (stick-ons, tip-on cards ...) a 100% guarantee of quality cannot be given for technical reasons (a tolerance limit of 5% is regarded as agreed upon).

11. The duty to store the copy material ends three months after the appearance of the advertisement, unless another agreement was expressly made.

12. The publisher assumes no liability for copy material placed at its disposal.

13. Press-proofs are produced by explicit request. With failure to return the press-proofs in due time the authorization for the printing is regarded as granted.

14. Costs, which arise through substantial change of the originally agreed upon design as well as the copy material provided, are charged to the client.

15. With cancellation of the orders for the text or advertisement section (as far as this is technically still possible for the publisher) an amount of 25% of the value of the advertisement is billed as reimbursement of costs.

16. For printing errors, which do not significantly impair the meaning of the advertisement, no reimbursement is made.

17. The publisher reserves the right to make color variations contrary to the original for typographical reasons.

18. In the case of advertisements, which are designed according to the layout, or if specified type sizes are adhered to and the ordered advertisement does not suffice, the entire print amount must be paid.

19. A liability is excluded for damages, which arise through non-appearance of an advertisement on a given day or through printing, setting and placement errors. In each case, the liability of the publisher is absolutely limited with the pro-rata insertion fee allocated to the afflicted part of the run.

20. Placement requests are only binding for the publisher in the case of the payment of the additional fee for placement.

21. With postponement for technical reasons without prior notification of the client neither the payment can be withheld nor compensation for damages be demanded.

22. Insertion complaints are only recognized within eight days after the appearance of the advertisement, the complaint must be made in written form.

23. The claim for customer rebate only exists when a written advertising order exists and this is issued at latest with the first insertion. Retractive advertising orders cannot be recognized. The rebate year is the calendar year. Any rebate claim expires with default of payment and insolvency proceedings.

24. The customer rebates can be immediately considered during rendering of accounts at the request and with the consent of the publisher or can be accredited after expiration of the rebate termination time period. The publisher reserves the right to change this allocation type at any time.

25. Rebate settlements are to be claimed in writing at latest three months after the expiration of the rebate year.

26. With too high a rebate grant a subsequent billing occurs after the expiration of the one-year period, in which interest on late payments in the amount of 14% per annum is charged for the missing amount.

27. Invoice complaints will only be recognized within four weeks from the date of issue of the invoice. The complaint must be made in written form.

28. In the case of changes in the advertising rates, the latter also go into effect immediately for current orders (also for periods of less than a year).

29. The publisher reserves the right to demand advance payments.

30. The invoices of the publisher are due for payment 30 days after receipt. All transfers occur at the risk of the client and are carried out such that the credit of the amount is available to the publisher at latest on the day of maturity. All bank service charges are without exception for the account of the client. In the event of default, 14% interest per annum is to be paid for the respective delinquent amounts, which are due immediately. Furthermore, besides the customary reminder fee of the publisher, the client is obligated to pay all costs, expenses and cash expenditures, of whatever title, accruing to the publisher in pursuance of its claims. In addition to the legally determined costs, he, therefore, also has to compensate for all pre-litigation costs, particularly of the debt collection agency or attorney commissioned by the publisher. Incoming payments are first credited against interest and fees and lastly for the pure amounts invoiced.

31. In the case of insolvency or payment default, the publisher demands immediate payment of the entire account balance with all additional expenses or with all discounts (for example, rebates, commissions) afforded since the beginning of the business connection.

32. In the case of business disruptions or interventions by force majeure the publisher is entitled to full payment of the published insertions, if the orders are fulfilled with 75% of the circulation underlying the calculation of the price of the ads. With a full line inserted below 75% the payment is made on a pro-rated basis.

33. Invoices are payable and achievable in Vienna. Vienna is regarded as the place of fulfilment. The relevant responsible court in Vienna adjudicates on all disputes arising from the present orders.
