JCPMS is issuing a call for papers for a planned special issue on Psychopathology in Medical Settings. The purpose of this special issue is to present and discuss psychopathological conditions that are prevalent in medical conditions and settings, and which pose specific challenges to clinical psychologists working in medical settings. The entire range of psychopathologies (e.g., depression, anxiety, eating, and personality disorders) and of medical settings and conditions (e.g., cancer, immunological deficiencies, reproductive and sexual medicine, neurology, pediatrics, etc.) are relevant for the special issue’s mission. The special issue will be guest-edited by Golan Shahar, Ph.D., who also serves as Associate Editor for JCPMS.

The contributions sought should take the form of a review/opinion article. Empirical data may be included, but mainly for illustrative purposes, and they are not mandatory. Submissions will be evaluated primarily with respect to the review's accuracy and depth, and their ability to inform the practice of clinical psychology in medical settings. All submissions will be peer reviewed as is the case for all manuscripts submitted to the Journal. Manuscript length should be no more than 35 pages inclusive of references and tables. Preparation of the manuscript should conform to the journal's Instructions for Authors, which appear online in the following link: https://www.springer.com/medicine/journal/10880?detailsPage=pltcie_614246. The deadline for submission is April 1st, 2019.

All manuscripts should be submitted through the manuscript portal <www.jocs.edmgr.com>. Prior to submitting, please approve the topic with Dr. Shahar at golan.shahar878@gmail.com by forwarding a brief note and concept of the manuscript.
