

Call for Books and Monographs in two Springer Press Book Series

Studies in Arts-Based Educational Research (SABER) And SpringerBriefs in Arts-Based Educational Research (BABER)

In the past 20 years there has been a proliferation of research methodologies, especially those employing Arts-based media such as image, gesture, sound and creative writing, to generate, interpret and disseminate creations/findings. Dissemination opportunities have grown with the publication of books, book chapters and journal articles with a few links to websites that display actual performances and images. Springer Press is pleased to announce an international series of books, edited books and monographs entitled Studies in Arts-Based Educational Research (SABER) and SpringerBriefs in Arts-Based Educational Research (BABER). These series will not only be a focused book resource of the work of Arts-Based educational researchers but also provide a permanent on-line repository so a variety of media can be exhibited along with the print books or ebooks.

The series will focus on research that utilizes aesthetic forms to (re)generate, (re)interpret and (re)represent human and more than human worlds. Methodologies and modalities can include but are not restricted to: Arts-Based Inquiry, A/r/tography, Arts Practice-Based Research, Auto-Ethnography, Collaboration, Community-Based Art, Connective Aesthetics, Creative Non-Fiction, Critical Arts-Based Research, Dance, Drama, Ethnodrama, Feminisms, Film, Fiction, Installation Art, Music, Novels, Performance, Performative Inquiry, Playbuilding, Poetry, Poetic Inquiry, Video, Socially Engaged Art, Sound Art, Theatre, and Visual Arts.

The editorial board recognizes that there exist multiple perspectives on what constitutes Arts-Based Educational Research. Generally, we believe that 'Arts-Based' is research 'through,' 'with' and 'for' the arts, not merely 'on' the arts. Submissions should demonstrate how the arts enhance the understanding of Arts-Based Educational Research and researchers, general audiences and topics/issues under investigation while being aesthetically infused in themselves. While exegesis will most often be included, artistic expression should be a major focus of discourse. This series holds 'education' in the broadest sense; that is 'education' as the learning/transformation/change that takes place individually and collectively in diverse formal and informal spaces, places and moments. The series collection will survey and exemplify the expansive research being conducted through a variety of forms of Arts-Based Educational Research. It is expected that there will be a wide range of topics examined through the arts but all should have an educational component, inclusive of and inviting critical perspectives on both formal and informal curriculum and pedagogy.

All books will support videos, audio recordings, images and other creative formats. These will be housed in PRISM, the University of Calgary's digital repository. PRISM provides a permanent, openly accessible, and highly discoverable home for digital creative forms associated with the book series. PRISM allows authors/creators to choose a Creative Commons license that sets the conditions under which creative formats may be shared and used. It also provides creative formats with a stable URL to facilitate linking and citations.

PRISM will be an essential component of the book series and authors are encouraged to include digital creative forms in their books. For example, a script with a video of a performance, a documentary of an ABER workshop with some video examples, a series of stills of a painting in progress with a metacognitive log, a video of a gallery walk through/with narration, and a virtual exhibit of visual arts are just some of the possibilities.
