Journal of Cancer Survivorship

Research and Practice

Editor: M. Feuerstein

- ▶ Publishes basic research, epidemiological studies, clinical investigations, health services and policy-related research
- ▶ Improves understanding of survivorship topics affecting quality of care, health, function, and well-being
- ▶ Reflects growing interest consistent with increasing prevalence rates and future global impact

Cancer survivorship is a worldwide concern. More and more cancer survivors are searching for legitimate sources of health information and educating themselves via the internet. In addition, the research in this area is growing rapidly and requires a forum. Journal of Cancer Survivorship publishes original research on humans (both laboratory and clinical), systematic and meta-analytic literature reviews, clinical investigations and policy-related research that can impact the quality of care and quality of life of adult cancer survivors. The journal presents peer reviewed papers relevant to improving the understanding, prevention, and management of the multiple areas related to adult cancer survivorship that can affect quality of care, longevity, and quality of life.
