

International Review of Economics

Journal of Civil Economy

Editor-in-Chief: L. Bruni

- ▶ Focuses on the economics of social interactions, wellbeing, happiness and related fields
- ▶ Considers the 'civil' and ethical dimensions of economic issues
- ▶ Showcases high-quality empirical, theoretical and policy-oriented contributions

International Review of Economics - Journal of Civil Economy (IREC) covers a broad range of macro- and microeconomic topics, and showcases high-quality empirical, theoretical and policy-oriented contributions. In particular, IREC welcomes papers focused on the analysis of social interactions, wellbeing, welfare and happiness, capabilities, reciprocity, trust, relational goods, formal and informal institutions, law and economics, prizes and incentives, economics and philosophy, economic theology, the history of economic thought, non-profit organizations, and social economy. Civil Economy refers to a 18th-century Southern European tradition, which views the market as a pre-condition for civilization. Today, Civil Economy denotes a special focus on the 'civil' and ethical dimensions of economic issues, and on pursuing the common good in the economic domain.

4 issues/year

Electronic access

- ▶ link.springer.com

Subscription information

- ▶ springer.com/librarians

Officially cited as: Int Rev Econ

On the homepage of International Review of Economics at springer.com you can

- ▶ Sign up for our Table of Contents Alerts
- ▶ Get to know the complete Editorial Board
- ▶ Find submission information

