Journal of Physiological Anthropology

Editor-in-Chief: H. Nakamura
Honorary Editor-in-Chief: A. Yasukouchi

- Official journal of the Japan Society of Physiological Anthropology
- Discounted article processing charge for society members
- Rapid, thorough peer review by experts in the field

Publishing the latest research on the physiological functions of modern mankind, the Journal of Physiological Anthropology is the official open access journal of the Japan Society of Physiological Anthropology. The journal's main emphasis is on highlighting the physical and bio-cultural effects on human adaptability to the current environment, with topics including environmental physiology, epigenetic adaptation, and living environment. Providing fast and rigorous peer review by experts in the field, the journal offers discounted article processing charges for Society members.

Impact Factor: 1.250 (2016), Journal Citation Reports®

Giving authors in their area of expertise the opportunity to publish open access

- High visibility thanks to unrestricted online access
- Rigorous peer-review and high-quality author services
- Creative Commons licensed – authors retain copyright
- Citation tracking and inclusion in bibliographic databases
- Easy compliance with open access mandates

Electronic access

- jphysiolanthropol.biomedcentral.com