Social Disparities in Health and Health Care

Series Editors: R.J. Angel, W.R. Avison

Social disparities in health care is a topic at the forefront of both medical sociology and mental health research. The objective of the series is to highlight leading areas of study within these areas, as well as identify emerging issues for future research. Topics covered in this series include, but are not limited to:

- Identifying social sources of disparities in health and health care
- Understanding the causal processes that link disadvantage to health disparities
- Examining health disparities across the life course
- Understanding how variations in health perceptions and health behaviors influence health disparities
