Perspectives on Human-Computer Interaction Research with Older People

Series: Human-Computer Interaction Series

- Promotes a critical reflection about the research conducted so far in Human-Computer Interaction with older people
- Examines the relationship between older people and several digital technologies, such as smartphones, self-tracking and mid-air technologies, Embodied Conversational Agents (ECAs), blogs and 3D virtual environments
- Addresses empowerment, dementia, programming acceptance, informatics life course, social interaction experience, online leisure, ageism, privacy, and stereotypes
- Discusses technology used by older adults from a cross-cultural perspective and the need to adapt research methods to them
- Introduces a new, interdisciplinary perspective on HCI research with older people, with contrib

This book promotes a critical reflection about the research conducted so far in Human-Computer Interaction (HCI) with older people, whose predominant perspective focuses on decline, health, and help. It introduces a new (or different) perspective, which is grounded in interdisciplinary research on older people and digital technologies.
