Doing Ethnography in Criminology

Discovery through Fieldwork

- A unique volume that asks ethnographers in crime and justice to reflect on their research questions, research methods, and research trajectories
- Addresses ethnographies of subculture, of place, and of policing and the police state
- Includes 29 diverse contributions from prominent researchers in criminology

This innovative book examines the use of ethnography and fieldwork in Criminology and Criminal Justice Research. Using a combination of case studies, as well as "behind the scenes" contributions, it provides a comprehensive look at both the insights gained from ethnographic research, as well as the choices researchers make in conducting that work. The research is divided into three main sections, covering ethnographies of subcultures, ethnographies of place, and ethnographies of policing. It includes a diverse group of international contributors to provide perspectives on researchers' selection of questions to study, and their decisions about using ethnography to study those questions. This work will be of interest to researchers in criminology and criminal justice, particularly with a qualitative perspective, as well as related fields such as sociology, anthropology, and demography. It will also be of interest to students studying research methods and design.
