Responsibility and Resistance

Ethics in Mediatized Worlds

- First scientific publication to systematically explore the relationship between media ethics and mediatization theory
- Assembles the leading international scholars from the fields of mediatization research and media ethics in order stimulate a dialogue
- Touches a highly relevant topic that generates increasing attention among media practitioners – and offers expert knowledge

The volume deals with the normative challenges and the ethical questions imposed by, and through, the developments and changes in everyday life, culture and society in the context of media change. It is thus concerned with the questions of whether and how the central concept of (enlightened) ethics must evolve under these premises – or in other words: what form do ethics take in mediatized societies? In order to address this question and to stimulate and initiate a debate, the authors focus on two concepts: responsibility and resistance. Their contributions try to shed light not only on the empirical shreds of evidence of change in mediatized societies, but also on the normative challenges and ethical possibilities of these developments.
