Regulatory Issues in Organic Food Safety in the Asia Pacific

- Explores Food Production Science and the Emergence of a New Contractualism between Producers, Retailers and Consumers, and Between Nation States
- Integrates Expert Scholars and Practitioners and Draws on their Respective Insights and Experiences in the Field of Organics, Food and Health Safety
- Addresses Public Concerns about Organic Food Quality and Safety, as well as Highlighting the Importance of Standard-Setting Processes Globally

The book seeks to address the intersection of food organics and the emergence of a new contractualism between producers, distributors and consumers, and between nation states. Additionally, it seeks to cater to the needs of a discerning public concerned about how its own country aims to meet their demands for organic food quality and safety, as well as how they will benefit from integration in the standard-setting processes increasingly occurring regionally and internationally. This edited volume brings together expert scholars and practitioners and draws on their respective insights and experiences in the field of organics, food and health safety. The book is organized in three parts. Part I outlines certain international perspectives; Part II reflects upon relevant histories and influences and finally, Part III examines the organic food regulatory regime of various jurisdictions in the Asia Pacific.
