Political Science and International Relations : International Relations Theory

Gardner, Hall, American University of Paris, Paris, France

IR Theory, Historical Analogy, and Major Power War

- Develops a new approach to IR theory by way of critiquing concepts of both neo-realism and neo-liberalism, but also social-constructivism
- Examines factors that could cause a major power or nuclear war in the coming years
- Looks to historical examples to develop policies and find ways to resolve disputes and conflicts among states

This book critically examines elements of America-First nationalism, neo-conservatism, neo-realism, neo-liberalism, environmental theories, and social constructionism by way of developing an "alternative realist" approach to the study of the origins of major power war. The author critiques concepts of "polarity" and "sovereign" decision making and diplomacy before developing the concept of "highly uneven polycentrism." The book then develops a unique comparative historical approach that seeks to compare and contrast the pre-World War I, pre-World War II, and Cold War eras with the contemporary post-Cold War period. It is argued that the US, as it remains the leading global hegemon, must fully engage in multilateral diplomacy with major friends and rivals alike in the establishment of differing forms of power sharing and joint sovereignty accords—in order to prevent the global system from polarizing into two contending alliances more reminiscent of both the pre-World War I and pre-World War II periods than the "new Cold War."
