

Maram Masarwi

The Bereavement of Martyred Palestinian Children

Gendered, Religious and National Perspectives

Series: Palgrave Studies in Cultural Heritage and Conflict

- Uses field research findings to explore the subjective experiences of mourning among Palestinian parents and to examine how gender differences are manifested in these experiences
- Demonstrates how the conversion of personal bereavement into collective bereavement is gendered and facilitated by politics and religion
- Blurs the boundaries between the personal and the collective in understanding the Palestinian-Israeli conflict

This book examines the phenomenon of individual and collective bereavement in Palestinian society. It seeks to explore the boundaries of the discourse of bereavement and commemoration in that society through the interactive relations between religion, nationality and gender, and the ways these influence the shaping of the mourning process for Palestinian parents who have lost their children in the second (al-Aqsa) Intifada. Over the course of the book's five chapters, Maram Masarwi scrutinizes how these components have shaped the differences in behavior between bereaved fathers and bereaved mothers: what characterizes these differences, how they are expressed, and how they have managed to shape the characteristics of the experience of Palestinian bereavement.
