Care and Care Workers

A Latin American Perspective

Series: Latin American Societies

- Offers an original contribution to the study of care work by presenting a Latin American approach to the subject;
- Shows how aging populations are reshaping traditional care activities in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia and Uruguay;
- Situates local research within the international debates, comparing with studies conducted in France, Japan and USA;
- Adopts an intersectional approach, showing the connections between care work and the sexual and race/ethnic inequalities;
- Shows how deep social inequalities give way to new arrangements in the provision of care;

This book presents an original contribution to the study of care and care work by addressing pressing issues in the field from a Latin American and intersectional perspective. The expansion of professional care and its impacts on public policies related to care are global phenomena, but so far the international literature on the subject has focused mainly on the Global North. This volume aims to enrich this literature by presenting results of research projects conducted in five Latin American countries – Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia and Uruguay –, and comparing them with researches conducted in other countries, such as France, Japan and the USA. Latin America is a social space where professional care has expanded dramatically over the past twenty years. However, unlike Japan, USA and European countries, such expansion took place in a context of heterogeneous and poorly structured markets, in societies which stand out for its reliance on domestic workers to provide care work in the household as paid workers, in both formal and informal arrangements. Care and Care Workers: A Latin American Perspective will be a useful tool for sociologists, anthropologists, social workers, gerontologists and other social scientists dedicated to the study of the growing demand for care services worldwide, as well as to decision makers dealing with public policies related to care services. "Society cannot function without the unpaid (and poorly and informally paid) work of caregivers."
