International Labor Mobility to and from Taiwan

Series: SpringerBriefs in Economics

- Covers both skilled and unskilled international labor mobility to and from Taiwan in the 21st century, focusing on the status quo, controversial issues, and policy implications
- Explores the migration of skilled laborers to and from Taiwan, which has not been well researched by preceding studies
- Analyzes the various issues of unskilled foreign laborers in Taiwan, both industrial workers and caregivers

This book is the first to cover the research of whole aspects of international mobility to and from Taiwan of both skilled and unskilled workers. The migration of skilled workers is a field that has not been well researched, although it is becoming very important for the economic growth of newly developing countries. The "brain circulation" through which workers who return to their home country bring back technology and the business style of a developed country contributed greatly to Taiwan in the 1980s and 1990s. However, according to the author's research, there is a little expectation that returnees now will contribute as in the past, as the proportion of students leaving Taiwan to study abroad is decreasing. Taiwanese companies therefore are seeking skilled human resources from developed countries in other ways. The author also found that some Taiwanese have been to China, Singapore or Japan in response to companies and universities' recruiting by offering high monetary compensation. This book clarifies those aspects of international skilled labor mobility to and from Taiwan and also analyzes the various issues regarding unskilled foreign laborers in Taiwan. There has been a gradual increase in unskilled foreign laborers, working both in industry and in domestic care in Taiwan.
