Climate Refugees in South Asia

Protection Under International Legal Standards and State Practices in South Asia

Series: International Law and the Global South

- Critically and cumulatively examines the protection afforded to climate refugees in South Asia under International Legal Standards and regional State Practices
- Develops a reorientation of the debate on climate refugees from maximalists and minimalists perspectives while treating climate change rights as human rights
- Highlights the lacunae in International Refugee Law, International Climate Change Law, and International Human Rights Law in relation to the problems of climate refugees with a unified approach germane to South Asia

This book addresses the forms of legal protection extended to people displaced due to the consequences of climate change, and who have either become refugees by crossing international borders or are climatically displaced persons (CDPs) in their own homelands. It explores the legal response of the South Asian Jurisdictions to these refugee-like situations, and also to what extent these people are protected under current international law. The book critically examines and assesses whether States have obligations to protect people displaced by climate change under international refugee law (IRL) and international climate change law (ICCL). It discusses the issue of climate migration in South Asia, analyzes the legal and judicial response initiated by South Asian nations, and also investigates the role of SAARC in relation to climate change and climate refugees.
